Full funding of Montana University System proposed

By Jeff McDowell
Kaimin Legislative Reporter

HELENA— The House Appropriations Education Subcommittee Saturday recommended that the Montana University System be funded at 100 percent of its peer formula.

Most of the money to bring the system up to full funding level will come from a tuition increase that was approved by the Board of Regents in December with the remainder to come from the state's general fund.

However, the recommendation is only a preliminary step in the legislative budget process. The recommendation must still go before the full Appropriations Committee and both chambers of the Legislature.

Full-formula funding is the Regents' top legislative priority. The formula is based on an average cost per student at peer institutions in the region and is calculated using enrollment at each of the six units in the system.

If the subcommittee's recommendations survive the budget process, funding for the entire system will increase about $13.4 million, from about $224 million during this biennium to about $237.4 million in the 1986-87 biennium.

Funding for the University of Montana would increase slightly from about $35 million this year to about $36.7 million in 1986 and about $37 million in 1987.

UM President Neil Bucklew said the subcommittee's action was "very fair, given the tight revenue picture."

"The subcommittee seems very firm in its commitment" to fully fund the formula, he said.

Bucklew also said he thinks it is "very, very likely" that the recommendations will survive the budget process.

"They are conservative recommendations," he said, which do not require a "great increase in general fund money."

Bucklew also said he thinks it is "only appropriate" that the Legislature fully fund the formula because students will pay for most of the increase.

Of the $13.4 million increase, about $7.3 million is needed to maintain the system at its current level of operation while about $6.1 million is the amount calculated to bring the system up to full funding of the formula. The formula is now funded at 97 percent for instruction and 95 percent for administrative support.

Additional revenue to fund the total increase will come mostly from the 20 percent tuition increase approved by the Regents in December. That increase will generate an additional $8.6 million over the next two years. About $4.7 million of the increased funding would come from the state general fund.

The tuition increase, which will be phased in over two years, will cost a full-time, in-state student an extra $180, while a full-time, out-of-state student will pay an extra $306.

UTU's fate up for vote

By Judi Thompson
Kaimin Reporter

The fate of the University Teachers Union as the collective bargaining agent for University of Montana professors will be determined by a vote of the UM professors in early April.

No union or group responded to the petition posted by the Personnel Appeals Division of the State Department of Labor and Industry, leaving the matter of the decertification of the University Teachers Union to a vote of the UM professors.

Robert Jensen, administrator of the Montana Board of Personnel Appeals, said no party intervened within the 20 day posting period which ended yesterday.

Therefore, the forthcoming election will offer the professors a choice between retaining the UTU representation or abandoning collective bargaining representation.

Within the next few days, Jensen said the board will determine an election date. He said he expects the election to be held sometime after April 1.

Keith Osterheld, spokesman for the Coalition of University Professors (CUP), the group which requested the petition, and which is in favor of the decertification of the union, said his group will make an effort to sway the opinions of the professors toward decertification before the election.

"We expect to start putting out position papers explaining our position later this week" to the UM professors, he said.

UTU President Peter Koehn was not available for comment on the decertification issue yesterday afternoon.

ASUM elections scheduled for next two days

By Carlos A. Pedraza
Kaimin Reporter

Students will go to the polls tomorrow and Thursday to vote for three ASUM officers and 20 Central Board members. Polls will be open from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. in the University Center mall.

Running for ASUM president and vice president are Bill Mercer and Amy Johnson, Jeff Weldon and Howard Crawford.

Mercer is a former ASUM Legislative Committee chairman and CB member; he is running for office from Helena, where he is a legislative intern. Johnson, his running mate, is now on CB. Weldon is currently Legislative Committee chairman and served on CB last year. Crawford, his running mate, has been president of the Kiyi-Yo Indian Club for a year.

Thornton Johnston and incumbent Greg Gullickson are running for ASUM business manager.

Johnston is a two-term member of CB and also serves on the Budget and Finance Committee. Gullickson is running for his third term as business manager.

Students will also cast ballots, in whatever district they choose, for Central Board representatives. Those students choosing on-campus ballots will vote for five of the eight candidates running.

Persons choosing off-campus ballots will select 13 students out of the 29 contenders.

If students vote in the organized off-campus or married student housing districts, they will vote for one CB representative. Candidates on the ballot for these districts are running unopposed.

Two parties, one coalition and several independent candidates are on the election slate for CB this year.

The Students for the University of Montana (SUM) party consists of several interns at the state Legislature and some members of fraternities and sororities.

Students Toward Active Government (STAG) has three incumbent CB members and several fraternity and sorority members.

The "Rainbow Coalition" of CB candidates has eight members who have not been running as a party, but have been cooperatively advertising during the campaign. The coalition is composed of non-traditional students and members of minority and special-interest campus groups.

Students must have their UM identification cards in order to vote.

Re-elect Gullickson

One of the biggest problems plaguing student government at the University of Montana over the years has been the lack of continuity in the ASUM office.

Normally, each year at election time an entirely new ASUM executive board, consisting of president, vice president and business manager, is chosen. Even the classified positions of ASUM accountant and secretary/receptionist have experienced personnel changes during the past year.

This year the winning presidential and vice presidential candidates—either Bill Mercer and Amy Johnson or Jeff Weldon and Howard Crawford—should consider themselves lucky in that they should have an experienced business manager to work with in Greg Gullickson.

Editorial

Gullickson is seeking re-election to his third term as ASUM business manager. He is running against Central Board member Thornton Johnston.

Since his appointment to the business manager's post in Fall Quarter 1983, Gullickson has worked hard to improve ASUM. His dedication to the ASUM Student Loan program has provided much-needed assistance to many UM students by keeping them in school and putting food on their tables when they had nowhere else to turn.

Gullickson has also helped simplify the ASUM budgeting process during his tenure by eliminating some forms of lobbying, providing CB members with additional information on ASUM groups and requiring groups to justify how the money they receive from ASUM is to be spent.

He was also responsible for the publication of the popular ASUM Handbook, a guide to ASUM and its committees.

His opponent, Johnston, has served two terms on CB and has been a member of the ASUM Budget and Finance Committee. Aside from showing up at the meetings, Johnston contributes very little to CB. The majority of his comments are sarcastic and intended to ridicule others.

At a recent candidates' forum, Johnston said he had "no particular reason" for running for business manager other than he had been on the budget and finance committee and that he wanted to clarify ASUM policies.

Given this kind of reasoning, UM students should find no particular reason to vote for Johnston in this week's election.

The Kaimin endorses Greg Gullickson for ASUM business manager.

Take time to vote

Last week, only 10 percent of the UM student population cast ballots in the ASUM primary election. It's no wonder that Neil Bucklew and his cronies in Main Hall take ASUM and the students of this institution so lightly. They simply think that students just don't care.

The only way UM students will ever receive more attention is by becoming visible on campus. One of the best ways to achieve this visibility would be for more students to take part in the electoral process.

A high voter turnout at this week's election would show Bucklew, the Board of Regents, the Legislature and others that the students at UM do care what they do with our money and that UM students are not going to sit back and be silent any longer.

By voting, students can have a say in who will represent them in dealing with the administration and other governing bodies. This year ASUM has even set aside two days—Wednesday and Thursday—for students to vote.

The important thing is not who you vote for, but just showing you care by taking a few minutes and voting.

I, too

EDITOR: As a student, I, too endorse Jeff Weldon and Howard Crawford for ASUM president and vice president, and would like to expand upon their abilities and accomplishments you cited in your editorial.

Both presidential candidates have worked for me as chair of the Legislative Committee, Weldon for the past five months. Weldon has taken on projects demanding much of his time and diligently carried them to fruition. Weldon is the candidate who fulfilled his obligations down to the final report, required or not. Weldon is well aware of his responsibility and accountability. I've seen him aggressively pursue issues relentlessly. He not only deals with the University Administration effectively, he (most important to me, a student) refuses to compromise his dedication to the student perspective.

As for the qualifications of Howard Crawford, I'm disappointed in your editorial last Friday. You failed to mention the reason he was selected as Weldon's running mate; namely, he almost single handedly turned the Kyi-Yo Club around, making it one of the most active and productive student organizations on our campus. His strong commitment wasn't merely articulated, but put to bonafide efforts of readily visible effects. He's spent much more energy than simply attending meetings.

I've read complaints that the Weldon administration would be a continuation of mine with it's "strained relationship" with the university administration. Perhaps the relationship is strained. The reason isn't lack of communication, but it's nature: they didn't always hear what they had wanted. For that reason I, a student, sincerely hope the next administration will be a continuation of mine. I'm convinced that Weldon has not only the smile, but the backbone we students need representing us.

Clear alternatives

EDITOR: I am writing to endorse Bill Mercer and Amy Johnson for ASUM president and vice president. Their candidacy presents a clear alternative in the upcoming election.

I have had the opportunity to serve on Central Board for the past year and based upon this experience, Mercer and Johnson are the superior ticket. They both have served on and participated in various campus organizations and understand the important role these subgroups play at UM. This experience is a key in the vice presidential race. While Johnson has served on Central Board, Legislative Committee, Academic Standards and Curriculum Review Committee and many others, Crawford has only been affiliated with one group. This is a critical difference when considering the vice president will administer the ASUM Committee process.

Mercer's experience at the Montana Legislature and with the UM administration is another differentiation point. The new ASUM president will take office in April. This is also the last month of the Legislature-a critical budgeting time for UM. His thorough knowledge of the process and associations are essential for a smooth transition from the present ASUM administration. In addition, his past working relationships with the administration indicate he has established a solid foundation to negotiate our needs throughout the upcoming term.

I encourage all students to vote and to support Bill Mercer and Amy Johnson-experience counts!

Swaying support

EDITOR: This letter is in regard to the Kaimin's "official" Central Board endorsements.

I find it deplorable that a newspaper, which is supposedly a non-biased, informative medium, would stoop so low as to single out individual candidates. Since when has the Kaimin been in a position to sit in judgement and tell us how to vote? The Kaimin seems to have decided that they alone have the right to choose our student representatives for us. The last time I checked, the purpose for holding an election was to let the student body decide who is better qualified.

If the students working on the Kaimin would like to vote for those certain individuals, they have that right.

However, the paper itself is funded with the student activity fee and every student running in this election has the right to expect fair and equal representation.

The editorial stated that these endorsements were based on the personal profiles that were to appear in the following days paper. Why didn't the Kaimin run the profiles first and let the general student body decide for itself? Perhaps members of the staff are worried that their friends won't be elected on their own merits and need a little boost?

A prime example of this would appear to be the endorsement of Ford Stuart and 8 of the 10 SUM party members. It's no secret that Ford is closely tied to several members of the Kaimin staff. I would be bold enough to suggest that it was under his direction and not actual abilities that formed the basis for the endorsement selections. I don't think factors such as merely being a freshman, a nomination for the Truman Scholarship, gaining "experience" as an intern or even being a "former President of IFC" are enough criterion to set these candidates above others.

We're all old enough to make a decision, such as who to vote for, on our own. We don't need someone else to tell us who to vote for.

I strongly urge you to vote, but I hope you vote for a candidate because you believe they would represent you best, and not because a handful of students tell you to.

Renda Greene
Senior, Elementary Education

Broader base

EDITOR: I am writing this letter to endorse Bill Mercer and Amy Johnson for president and vice president respectively for ASUM.

Bill has experience working in the state Legislature and also served on CB. He possesses the leadership qualities needed to be our President. Amy chaired the Homecoming Committee, which gave her the opportunity to work directly with the administration.

She also served on CB, which gave her insight to the way our government works.

I feel Bill and Amy represent a broader base of students on this campus than their opponents. They are more open to change within government than their adversaries, because they have not made commitments to groups on campus that follow the policies of our present administration.

Another key point is that Amy's opponent, Howard Crawford, does not have experience on CB, his only experience is in a club recognized by ASUM. Therefore, I endorse and seek your support for Bill Mercer and Amy Johnson for president and vice president respectively for ASUM.

False pride

EDITOR: According to STAG party leaders in last Wednesday's Kaimin, the key to their campaign is experience.

As a CB candidate in the Rainbow Coalition I am bothered by this false pride. Unbeknownst to them, there are qualities and degrees of experience. In light of the controversial reputation the current CB has on campus the degree of their experience is clearly obvious.

ASUM students are tired of an ineffective, incapable, and indulgent student government. It is time for change! Please Vote!

MY ARTS DIARY

Shakespeare and Sondheim carry the week in style

By Rob Buckmaster

Kaimin Entertainment Editor

Dear Diary—February 26, 1985—The 1985 Academy Award nominations have finally been announced! Since I was a kid, I've liked to speculate on the winners. And though it's a little early yet, several Kaimin staffers and I will make our favorites public in this quarter's final issue...

THEATER THEATER THEATER

The Drama department's latest production is Shakespeare's "The Taming of the Shrew," which starts this Thursday, February 28, and continues March 1-2 and 5-9 at 8 p.m. in the Masquer Theater.

This is not your usual kind of Shakespeare.

Instead of Renaissance Italy, the production's setting is Mexico during the 1930s. This relocation is intended to capture the spirit of the comedy by re-creating a familiar, Hollywood version of the "Latin countries." Films such as Flying Down to Rio had the feel that the actors in this production are trying to work with.

The costumes and set reflect this south-of-the-border feel, too. The set has been designed with two things in mind—a Latin American look and Shakespeare's intention that "Taming of the Shrew" be seen as a play-within-a-play. Here, that idea is updated by transforming the Masquer into a film set, complete with clapboards ("take one") and movie reels outlining the stage.

Tickets are $5 for all seats and can be reserved by calling 243-4581. Reserve early, as the Masquer is a very small theater.

American musical theater, meanwhile, is the theme for the University of Montana Music department's annual "Showtime" benefit, this Friday and Saturday at 6:30 p.m. in the Stan Lynde Ballroom of the Missoula Sheraton.

This year's show, "Side by Side by Sondheim," will be presented in a dinner theater setting, with roast beef and salmon on the menu. Tickets—which include dinner, show and no-host cocktails—cost $20, $6 of which is tax deductible as a contribution to the Music Scholarship Fund.

Stephen Sondheim is one of Broadway's most innovative (and successful) composers.

• Chamber Chorale/University Choir, March 3, Music Recital Hall, 8 p.m.

"Sunday in the Park with George" is still running in New York, as is "Sweeney Todd," a macabre comic opera about the "demon barber of Fleet Street" who turns customers into ground round.

And that's just his recent stuff; other credits include "West Side Story" (with Leonard Bernstein), "Gypsy" and "A Little Night Music" (of "Send in the Clowns" fame).

"Side by Side" will cover all that ground and more. The large cast includes members of Esther England's Opera Workshop at UM. Missoula Children's Theatre head James Caron will act as stage director, and Music professor Joseph Mussulman will provide narration.

Paid reservations are due by tomorrow. Contact the UM Music Office at 243-6880 for more information.

MUSIC MUSIC MUSIC MUSIC

There's a full music calendar this week as well. On the serious side, there's Faculty Chamber Music tonight, a Collegiate Chorale concert on Friday, a saxophone recital by Kimme Young and Brian Whittemore on Saturday and a combined Chamber Chorale and University Choir concert on Sunday. All events are in the Music Recital Hall; all begin at 8 p.m.; all are free.

On the pop side, ASUM Programming will present a free 90-minute concert by "country-folk" stylists Aileen and Elkin Thomas Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the UC Lounge.

And this week's entry in the Winter Film Series is Monty Python's The Meaning of Life, a three-star patchwork of absurd skits only the Pythoneers could invent. Especially memorable is the hilarious restaurant interlude. The movie shows this Friday, March 1, at 8 p.m. in the Underground Lecture Hall.

ASUM election preview: the race for Business Manager

The last in a series of Kaimin candidate profiles

Outside funding for ASUM groups a major priority for Johnston

By Carlos A. Pedraza

Kaimin Reporter

If elected ASUM business manager, two-term Central Board member Thornton Johnston would help some campus organizations find sources of funding outside ASUM.

Johnston, 26, a junior in political science/economics from Statesboro, Ga., says that the UM administration has to "come down to earth" and realize that the fine arts groups and ASUM Day Care cannot continue to be satisfactorily funded by ASUM.

"The student activity fee is not for me to pay for music groups to perform around the state," Johnston says.

As for day care, Johnston says that unless the UM administration can stop "extorting an enormous amount of rent" for the day care center in McGill Hall, the program will suffer.

"ASUM needs to work on relations with the administration so that groups can get the money they need and want," Johnston says.

Johnston, who has served on Budget and Finance Committee for three years, says another priority as business manager would be a revision of the ASUM fiscal policy.

"We need to update it," he says. "We need to bring it (the fiscal policy) up to the '80s. It's still in the '50s."

Johnston says he believes the business manager should play a "low-key" role in the ASUM administration.

"The business manager shouldn't implement a lot of changes in policy right away," Johnston says. "He needs to work well with people and has to be more of a diplomat than anything."

Johnston calls the $20,000 contingency fund set aside by Central Board last week "a good idea."

"It's one of the best things

ASUM has ever done as far as I'm concerned," he says.

The contingency fund is intended as a reserve, to pay accrued sick and annual leave

See 'Johnston,' page 12.

GREG GULLICKSON

Gullickson cites experience, continuity in bid for unprecedented third term

By Carlos A. Pedraza

Kaimin Reporter

If elected ASUM business manager for an unprecedented third term, Greg Gullickson says he would continue to make communication with students a priority and would try to ease the transition to computerized accounting for ASUM groups.

Gullickson, 21, a junior in business, said the major priority in his first term was "helping develop the image and knowledge of ASUM," through increased communication with the student body.

Gullickson did this with visits to dorm councils, fraternities and sororities, and by publishing "ASUM and You—A Comprehensive Guide to Your Student Government."

In his second term, Gullickson says he focused on streamlining the ASUM budgeting process by making ASUM groups provide line-item justifications for their spending.

Gullickson says this is the reason that, of the 54 groups requesting money this year, 23 asked for less than they did last year.

Gullickson stresses that continuity is the most important quality he offers as business manager.

Gullickson says he views the business manager's position as a "check and balance" to the ASUM president, though he said it is necessary for all three ASUM officers to work together.

Gullickson, who has not decided whom he will support in the presidential race, says he will "work with whoever is (elected) president."

Gullickson says it will be necessary for the newly elected Central Board to set criteria for allocating money to student groups. However, he says that CB members must do so without "targeting specific groups" which they may support or oppose.

"We can't make policy with an out-to-get-'em attitude," he says.

Gullickson says he does not want to see the new ASUM contingency fund used "as another special allocation fund."

The purpose of the contingency fund, which Gullickson proposed at CB's budgeting meeting last week, is "for ASUM to cover itself for any unforeseen circumstances," he says, such as paying employee benefits if any of ASUM's classified employees left their jobs.

If all of ASUM's classified workers left tomorrow, Gullickson says, ASUM would have to pay over $14,000 in benefits.

The fund would also be used to fund groups that organize during the course of the academic year, he says, groups that would otherwise have to wait another year before receiving any ASUM money.

"ASUM has to be more able to meet the needs of a vastly changing university on a timely basis," he says.

Griz finish conference against Cats

By Mike Olinger
Kaimin Sports Editor

Only a Cat-fight stands between the UM men's basketball squad and the Big Sky Conference post-season tournament, and that always-emotional battle will take place Saturday at 3 in Dahlberg Arena when the Montana State Bobcats face the Grizzlies.

The Grizzlies may have revenge in mind for this game after having suffered a 74-71 defeat at the hands of the Bobcats earlier this season in Bozeman. The game had been knotted at 71 and seemed headed for overtime when reserve guard Scott Hurley banked home a half-court shot with no time left to secure the win.

The Bobcats started the conference season with a 4-9 record but have since improved their overall mark to 11-15, 7-6 in the Big Sky. And MSU is coming off a pair of home wins over the same teams that the Grizzlies swept last weekend. They defeated the always tough Weber State Wildcats on Friday night, 79-66, and followed the next night with a 70-65 victory over Idaho State.

UM defeated the same teams in what was, and still is a do-or-die situation if the Grizzlies want a share of the regular season title.

Friday night, despite what Grizzly Head Coach Mike Montgomery called the "worst officiating that I've seen," UM hung on to defeat the Idaho State Bengals 63-62.

The game was close throughout the evening, much closer than most Griz fans expected it to be, and became even more intense after the final score of the MSU-WSC game was flashed on the scoreboard.

"It would have been a shame to lose that game," said Montgomery, "especially after MSU defeated Weber and left us a chance to tie with them."

So, with the victory, the stage was set for a most important game between the two teams that, in recent years, have loved to hate each other.

Each team needed the win if it wanted the regular season title, plus, Montana wanted to break its string of six losses to the Wildcats. And UM did just that, defeating Weber 66-58 largely, according to Montgomery, by approaching the game with the right attitude.

UM JUNIOR FORWARD Larry Krystkowiak overpowers Weber State's Shawn Campbell for two of his 17 points as the Griz topped the Wildcats for the first time in seven tries.

Gymnasts top Cats

Lori Aubin's first-place all-around performance led the UM gymnastics team to a 168.15 to 167.45 win over Montana State in Bozeman Friday night.

Aubin scored 36.00, a career best, to place Montana to a 1-2-3 finish in the all-around competition. Christy Chytraus was second with 35.40 and Shellie Kranz was third with 34.75.

Aubin took first in the balance beam with a 9.1 and tied for the top spot in the uneven parallel bars at 8.8. Chytraus won the floor exercise with a 9.1 while Kranz was first in the vault at 9.25.

Track records fall

Two UM women's track records and one men's record fell in the Kimmel Games in Moscow, Idaho last weekend.

Freshman Jennifer Harlan set a school and meet record in the 300-meter hurdles with a first-place time of 45.43, while Sheryl Dodge's discus toss of 145-11 was good enough for second place and a UM record.

Everett Barham broke his own school record with a time of 47.6 in the 400-meters to take second in the meet, just ahead of UM's Tony Coe who was clocked at 48.05.

Selvig says Lady Griz won't overlook Montana State

By Doug Whittaker
Contributing Sports Reporter

The University of Montana Lady Griz might not be blamed if they rest on their laurels a bit against the Montana State Lady Bobcats this Friday night in Bozeman.

Their fifth 20-win season in a row is guaranteed, as is a spot in the Mountain West Conference tournament, thanks to a pair of solid victories over Idaho State and Weber State this past weekend. And MSU, at the bottom of the conference, won't be going to the tournament.

But Coach Robin Selvig isn't going to look past MSU. "This is Bobcat week," he said, "and the game is as big as any one we've had so far. The tournament is two weeks away. Beating the cross-state team is what we're thinking about."

If records are an indication, the 20-6 Lady Griz should not have much trouble. Montana State is 3-11 in the MWAC and has struggled most of the year, grabbing two of those conference victories this past weekend, and was drubbed by UM 69-47 in Missoula a month ago.

But as Selvig noted, the Bobcats are a good team, and have been tougher at home than on the road. In wins over Idaho State and Weber State last weekend, MSU scored 89 and 92 points respectively.

Montana dominated on Friday night against Idaho State, hitting over 52 percent from the field and going 31 for 43 from the line, while Idaho State could only muster a 35 percent field goal percentage and 11 of 18 free throws.

In the first half, Montana's starters came right at Idaho State, working the ball down low to forward Anita Novak and center Sharla Murali, who would get the points or draw the foul. In the second half, with the starters watching from the bench, reserves Kris Moede and Stacey Edwards threw up a flurry of 15-foot jumpshots, hitting six of eight, to keep UM in control.

The Lady Griz led at half, 47-32, stretching that to a 91-69 final advantage. Novak led UM with 12 points and 10 rebounds, while Murali picked up 11 points along with freshman forward Dawn Sillicker.

On Saturday night against Weber State, it was a different story. Montana came out strong, trading buckets with the Mountain West's fourth-place team, but went flat in a hurry, shooting only 30 percent from the field. At the half, Weber led 30-21.

But after the break, UM ran off 18 points to Weber State's 6, which was enough for a three-point lead that was never lost. The final score was 70-54.

Heroine of the game was guard Barb Kavanagh, who scored 21 points for the game, 13 in the second half, while controlling the tempo of the game as Montana's floor leader.

Kavanagh and Novak, who as seniors were playing their last home games in Dahlberg Arena, were honored prior to the game and received standing ovations when Selvig replaced them late in the game.

The Lady Grizzlies will end up second or third in the conference depending on the outcomes of this weekend's games. Regardless of their position, they will play Eastern Washington in the first round, a team UM beat in overtime just two weeks ago.

If UM gets past EWU, the top team in the conference, Idaho, will almost surely be waiting. Selvig looks forward to that meeting, which will be the third for the teams this season; "if they can beat us a third time, you have got to hand it to them. They have been tough all year. But it is hard to beat a team three times in a row."

"I felt that we took the initiative in the game," he said, "that we didn't wait for it, we just said, 'let's go get it.' And once we set our minds to it, we were going to do whatever it took to win."

And besides good basketball, there was enough extra action to satisfy a variety of tastes among the 9,213 fans that squeezed into Dahlberg Arena. There were fights between players, obscenities between coaches and some crude crowd participation which was halted for the most part at halftime by Athletic Director Harley Lewis' request to behave "like a class crowd."

UM was led in scoring and rebounding against ISU by Larry Krystkowiak with 20 points and 12 boards. Krysko also led in rebounds with 11 against the Wildcats but game high scoring honors went to Larry McBride with 20.

Grady calls districting system for student representation unfair

By Kevin Twidwell
Kaimin Reporter

The current districting system for student representation at the University of Montana does not fairly represent the students, ASUM Constitutional Review Board Chairman Laurel Grady said recently.

Grady said she and others on the five-member board feel that the present districting system needs to be changed and the board is currently working on a new system to improve that representation.

According to Grady, the new districting plan would represent students by their "academic interests" instead of by where they live. There are more issues facing student's academic lives rather than those based on a student's residence, she said.

ASUM President Phoebe Patterson disagreed with this argument saying that student issues affect students differently according to where they live. She said a student who lives in the dormitory has a different perspective on issues than one who lives off-campus.

Under the present districting system, CB members are elected to represent students who live in the UM dormitories, fraternities and sororities, married-student housing and those who live in unorganized off-campus housing.

Under the proposed system CB members would be elected from the various "schools" at UM. CB members would be elected from the College of Arts and Sciences, School of Business, School of Education, School of Fine Arts, School of Forestry, School of Journalism, School of Pharmacy and Allied Health Services and the School of Law.

Board member Carlos Pedraza said the board has carefully scrutinized the proposed districts to make certain all students in all majors of study will be represented under the new system.

Grady said there will also be one graduate student seat and two undergraduate seats on the board to be filled by candidates from any district. The number of representatives from each school will be determined by the number of students in each school in relation to total ASUM membership.

Grady said there will be the same number of CB seats under the new system as there are now. Central Board consists of 20 student representatives and the three ASUM officers.

Patterson also expressed concern that the married-student housing district might lose its representation on the board and that the Greek system might lose some of its seats if the new system is implemented.

"Losing those seats is a small price to pay to get better representation for most students," Pedraza said. He added that the Greek system will probably not lose seats because a large number of "Greeks" will continue to run for the board.

He also said that since students will elect representatives from their school it will improve relations between ASUM and the students. He explained that the representatives will know exactly where to go to get input.

The changes in the districting are part of the board's effort to "revamp" the student constitution, Grady said. She said the board is "cleaning up the wording" and updating the constitution.

Pedraza said the board hopes to have the changes finished by the end of the quarter at which time it will be submitted to CB for approval. UM President Neil Bucklew also has to approve the changes to the constitution.

UM committee finds Black's philosophy research unsatisfactory

By Dan Black
Kaimin Contributing Reporter

A University of Montana philosophy department committee Friday found past research by Bryan Black, a UM assistant professor of philosophy, unsatisfactory, a decision which could lead ultimately to his dismissal.

The evaluation session, conducted Thursday and Friday, was ordered by an independent arbitrator last spring. Carlton Snow, the arbitrator in the dispute, determined that the original evaluation of Black's 1981-82 research was invalid and ordered the faculty to hold another evaluation session on the issue.

The case was arbitrated due to procedural flaws by the UM philosophy department and a claim by Black that the department was biased in its evaluation. Last week's evaluation was the third negative assessment of Black's research by the department, making him eligible for tenure review, a procedure that would allow the philosophy department to dismiss him.

Although Black can appeal the decision or file a grievance against the department, he said that a reversal of the decision is unlikely and his tenure will probably come up for review later this year.

Black said the decision of the committee was the result of long-held prejudice against him and his unconventional area of research. Black said that his research of Hegelian dialectics, a contemporary philosophical tradition, "offends traditional philoso-

Philosophy Department Chairman Thomas Huff said that he cannot comment on anything about Black's case because he is bound by a rule in the committee evaluation agreement not to discuss the personnel files of a faculty member.

Black's research was accepted for publication by the World Congress of Philosophy, but the faculty committee report stressed that publication alone does not warrant approval of Black's research.

Tom Birch, an assistant professor of philosophy and a supporter of Black, said that members of the committee should question their own qualifications to judge Black's research and should rely more heavily on outside assessments of his work.

Birch said that when Black was tenured, the department accepted a wider variety of philosophic views, but now it is narrowing its tolerance. He said it is highly unlikely that Black will be replaced if he is dismissed, adding that it can only serve to limit academic diversity and satisfy possible grudges.

Burke Townsend, the chairman of the evaluation committee, declined to comment on those claims saying that arguments of hearsay and grudges aren't appropriate for publication in the Kaimin.

The controversial research paper is "The Cultural Problem of Modernity" and is concerned with a philosophy of peace in a historical context. Black's other research activities involve the Montana peace movement. He spent more than 220 days in jail for various acts of civil disobedience including aiding people who dug a symbolic grave in the lawn of the Missoula County Courthouse.

Range Club offers raffle

The University of Montana Range Club is holding a raffle that will entitle the winner to three Spring Quarter credits worth $139.50.

The proceeds will go toward bringing speakers in for range club, forestry club and wildlife club functions and to purchase a computerized range simulator from Montana State University.

The simulator recreates varying range conditions such as rainfall for classroom use, said Kaye Dobberstein, senior in range management and president of the raffle committee. The simulator will be available to UM students and the general public spring quarter, she added.

Dobberstein said 500 tickets will be sold, each costing $1. She added that three tickets will be drawn and the second and third ticket holders will each receive a $10 gift certificate, donated by the U.C. Bookstore.

Satellite brings Spanish soaps, Canadian politics to UM

By Anne Peper

Kaimin Contributing Reporter

A Spanish soap opera, "Los Ricos Tambien Lloran — The Rich Also Cry," is just one of many television programs available to University of Montana students through a new satellite system.

The $5,000 system was installed on the roof of the Social Science building last October and according to Maureen Curnow, UM French professor, it enables UM to receive a variety of television programs that could be used in support of teaching in many disciplines.

She said that the system gives access to 122 regular full-schedule television channels broadcast from throughout the United States, Canada and Mexico — plus irregular, occasional programming from Europe and Asia.

Devon Chandler, director of Instructional Materials Services (IMS), said that presently UM is licensed to use only five of the 122 channels on the satellite dish — CBC in Canada, TCTV in Montreal, House of Commons in Canada, XEW-TV in Mexico City, and SIN (Spanish International Network).

However, Chandler said that UM is looking into the use of more channels. He said that the business school is interested in one that carries coverage of the stock market exchange because such a channel would give people easy access to stock market information.

Chandler said that because UM is a public institution it can only use channels that it's licensed for. He said stations that property owners receive free from the satellite, such as HBO, UM must pay for.

Curnow said that currently the satellite dish broadcasts into three places on campus — IMS, Liberal Arts room 144 and Liberal Arts room 342. Chandler said that UM is interested in equipping 17 more rooms in the Liberal Arts Building for viewing broadcasts from the satellite.

Chandler said that the additional space for viewing would provide teachers with "a lot more flexibility." He said that shows that are videotaped from the dish would then be available at more convenient times and with more space available, allowing more people to take advantage of the system.

Chandler said the satellite dish can only broadcast one television channel at a time, so use of it is on a first-come, first-served basis.

He said to use the satellite dish students must phone

IMS and reserve a time to watch a television program. He suggests that students go to IMS and look at the satellite TV guides to see what programs are available before they reserve time.

Chandler said that future plans for the satellite dish include two-way communication and multi-channel reception.

He said that the satellite dish presently has the ability to only receive telecasts. Chandler is interested in equipping the dish to "send out" programs to reach other parts of Montana.

He is also interested in equipping the satellite to receive multi-channel reception.

He said if the dish could receive many channels at once they could offer a wider selection of programs.

Curnow said that UM's foreign languages and literatures department has already benefited from the installation of the satellite system. She said that the dish has contributed to the "actuality of language in the world." She said that UM French students can get an idea of the variety of French accents by watching French newscasts from the satellite dish.

Funding

committee, said the subcommittee was doing its share to fully fund the formula.

"Tuition has been flat and should be moved up," he said. "But we don't want to replace general fund money with tuition."

Student spokesmen had protested to the committee that the tuition increase was being used as a bargaining chip by the regents, but the board's chairman, Jeff Morrison, has said the increase will take effect even if legislative funding is less than the amount needed to fully fund the formula.

The Legislature is trying figure out how to balance state budget with a projected deficit of about $50 million and Donaldson noted that the subcommittee's recommendations "are about as tentative as anything around here."

However, he added that the university system budget "should not be cut at the benefit of other state agencies."

The subcommittee also adopted enrollment figures predicting a slight decline in the system, from more than 27,000 students now to 26,536 in 1986 and 26,251 in 1987.

Johnston

for ASUM's classified employees, such as the ASUM Accountant or secretaries, should they quit. Johnston says the contingency fund can also be used as a "last resort" to bail out groups that are running a deficit and have no other way to pay it off.

Johnston says that if ASUM Day Care cannot find adequate money to supplement its ASUM allocation—and cannot get relief from the "exorbitant" rent charged by the UM administration—then the contingency fund is "an option to keep the day care program afloat."

Johnston says the contingency fund could also be used for special allocations to groups, if the Budget and Finance Committee did not feel that a particular request should be funded by ASUM's special allocation fund.

"But the final decision should be made by Central Board," Johnston says.

At UM enrollment is predicted to go from 8,174 students now to 8,183 in 1986 and 8,099 in 1987. The enrollment figures represent full-time student equivalents used by the Legislature in determining funding levels as opposed to actual student enrollment.

The subcommittee also acted on some program modification requests, recommending $137,000 for the UM Law School to implement curriculum changes. The recommendation is half of what was requested.

Denied were requests of $224,000 for UM's Yellow Bay Biological Station on Flathead Lake and $481,000 for UM to develop a master's degree program in business administration in cooperation with Eastern Montana College.

The subcommittee earlier approved a slight increase in funding for UM's Lubrecht Forest Conservation and Experiment Stations.

A funding request to replace UM's mainframe computer will be dealt with later.

Rotary scholarship announced

The Rotary Foundation of Rotary International is announcing its scholarship program for the 1986-87 academic year.

The Rotary Foundation seeks to promote understanding and friendly relations between peoples of different nations through Graduate, Undergraduate, Vocational, Journalism and Teacher of the Handicapped Scholarships for one academic year of study in another country.

Scholarship recipients are expected to maintain high standards of academic achievement while serving as unofficial "ambassadors of good will" between the peoples of the sponsoring and host countries.

The deadline date for applications is March 8, 1985. Additional information and applications may be obtained from the UM Financial Aids Office.
